In 2011, The Wallace Foundation launched an effort to test whether six urban districts could put in place the key parts of a strong principal pipeline to produce a large corps of effective school leaders. By 2016, it was clear that they could. A study to be published in 2018 will assess the pipelines' impact on schools and students.